

Bugles at Dawn

Arrested as a young ensign after the eve of Waterloo, and interviewed by Wellington himself, John Bold flees to India where, in the 6th Bengal Infantry, he is confronted by a country where peace is an unnatural state as Mahratta chieftains plunder each others territory. Riding high as commander of an irregular unit, John Bold is awarded a lieutenants commission by Lord Hastings, Governor General. He christens his half-squadron native cavalry formation Bolds Horse and spearheads the British break-up of Mahratta power while, despite all the protocol of British India, remaining his own man.
